

Using Adverbs to Express Place

You wake up in a castle's dungeon. You remember why they came for you but you know you're innocent. How do you escape? Do you need to prove your innocence or can you live on the run?

Write about your escape. In your writing, you must include at least 5 sentences that use adverbs of place. Some of the adverbs of place are shown below. You can use any that are not on the list.

Adverbs of place:

- There, nowhere, everywhere, in, above, below, by, outside
- Down, left, over, away

Kerdunk! A heavy prison door slams shut and all I have is a rat for company in this cold, wet dungeon. I must get out! I'm innocent! People need to know what the evil king has done. Through the bars in the door, I can see the guards pacing up and down. On one of the guards, I can see some keys hanging down. I pretend to fall asleep against the bars of the door and with a quick swoop, I steal the keys. The guard walks away. When night falls, I carefully unlock my prison door and sneak past the guards. I make my way to the slippery stone steps and run up. In the dark room are more guards sleeping on the stone floor. I carefully tiptoe by. At the end of the room is a shaft of moonlight shining through a crack in the door. Now is my chance. I just have to get outside. I try my stolen keys again in the new door. They work! I run out of the open door and head across the stone bridge. I hear the sound of footsteps behind. I run as fast as my legs can carry me into the dense forest. Guards carrying torches and swords soon start pouring out of the prison. I'll take care of the king later, but for now I need to get away. It won't be long before guards are everywhere. I'll head to the Dark Lands. Not even the king's power can reach that cursed place. I should be safe there. At least for a day or so. After that, revenge.
